The Lowry Hotel Serves up Xmas Dinner to Wood Street Mission Families

By now most of Manchester are swept up in Christmas fever distracted by what's... What gifts to buy? What new outfit do I need for my works do? What decorations do I need to buy for the tree? What nibbles and tipples will I treat myself to tonight? The five-star Lowry Hotel demonstrates the true essence of Christmas by continuing to work with local family support charity Wood Street Mission.

For the past three years the hotel's double AA-rosette River Restaurant has opened its doors to children and teenagers, inviting them and their guardians to enjoy a festive feast with all the trimmings.

Last year the children were aged 3 months to teenagers, so this year Wood Street Mission decided it was the turn of the older kids; to pop a cracker, tuck in to the turkey and pick up a chocolate Santa on their way home.

As always Hotel Manager, Adrian Ellis was on hand to ensure the party experienced the full VIP treatment, and it is evident that this is a cause close to The Lowry Hotel's heart "Wood Street Mission is an amazing charity, and the work they do is invaluable to the lives of many families in Manchester and Salford. We are proud to have them as the hotel's official charity." Adrian said.

Wood Street Mission helps FOUR THOUSAND families living on a low income by helping to meet their day-to-day needs and improving children's life chances. Founded 147 years ago, it provides support to Manchester and Salford families, most famously with its Christmas project which last year gave new toys and food to over 2,000 families and 4,500 children. This year the numbers are set to be even higher. Wood Street Mission makes sure that children up to the age of 14 wake up to new toys and gifts, which can only be the biggest of reliefs to those struggling to make ends meet.

The Lowry hotel selected Wood Street Mission as its charity of the year in 2015 and the partnership has continued and flourished ever since.
